Beauty Is as Beauty Waves Her Hair, Declares Nestle

NEW YORK—Permanent waves as fashionable coiffures cost the women of the United States $150,000,000 annually, according to Charles Nestle, famous international beauty expert in an address here.

"Six million permanent waves are produced yearly in beauty parlors," said Mr. Nestle, "and $250,000 more by home outfits. Such coiffures done by a professional cost from $15 to $100 with $25 as a fair average. There has never been such a wide-spread fashion in the history of women's styles. Today, beauty is as beauty waves her hair."

Mr. Nestle is the inventor of the permanent wave which he produced with his own machine in 1905. He was Europe's most famous hair-dresser before he came to this country as a beauty specialist and manufacturer of permanent-wave machines. He has dressed the hair of many of the crowned heads of Europe.

He has ridden to fortune on the crest of the permanent wave. This, as he himself says, is due to the fact that he has made a lifetime study of hair. He says that character can be read as scientifically by the hair as by the expression of the face or the contour of the head. He employs several hundred persons in his factory and beauty shop and has hired them all, he says, "by their hair." Mr. Nestle recently caused a nation-wide furore by saying that bobbed hair, if persisted in for several generations, will evolve a race of bearded women. He thinks bobbed hair is gradually robbing women of their distinctively feminine characteristics. It is said of him that if the day were forty-eight hours long, he could keep constantly employed at $100 an hour in dressing women's hair, so great is the demand for his service and so extensive his fame as an artist.

BOYLE CHARGES DELEGATE WITH DUTY FAILURE

Declares He Is Responsible for the Menace of Mass Voting in Indians.

from the Territory for aged indigent Indians and to have their orphan provided for by Territorial funds," he continued. In support of his assertion he quoted from a recent issue of a paper published under the auspices of the Alaska Native Brotherhood, and edited by Paul Sutherland, brother to William Paul, who had attempted to force the School Board there to admit an Indian child into the Public School. He referred briefly to the manner in which the Indian leaders are credited with raising funds through assessments of the various camps of its organization.

For Home Government

Mr. Boyle's talk was a straightforward exposition of the platform on which he is making his campaign for election as Delegate. He referred to himself briefly as a miner from the age of 11 years to manhood and one who worked in the coal mines of Pennsylvania and in the Rocky Mountain States and in lode and placer mines of the west; to his work in Washington where he got an insight into how the departments and bureaus which are so largely concerned with Alaskan affairs function; to his work in the U. S. Land Office in Alaska where he handled not only mining claims but all matters pertaining to public lands.

"The bottom has not fallen out of the mining industry and I am confident that mines will be developed on Douglas Island equal to any of the past," he declared, mentioning properties with which he was familiar. He assured the audience he would do anything in his power to aid in getting road and trail allotments.

Mr. Boyle declared that Alaska was entitled to and needed the authority to govern itself. Alaska's right to this, he added, has always been upheld by the Democratic party. This included the right to control its game, fur and fisheries.

He declared that Delegate Sutherland had devoted his time to "fishing" in Washington and had succeeded in getting a bill enacted into law which was worse even than the reservation system which he had so heartily condemned. "The fisheries of Alaska can only be handled intelligently through the Alaska Legislature where all persons interested in the industry could be heard," he said. Real fishermen never got to go before Congress which depended on what it learned from "Fisherman Paul and Fisherman Dan" and lobbyists for the canners told it, to formulate legislation.

The game regulations of Alaska he said, according to Delegate Sutherland's admission, while nominally in the hands of the Biological Survey really is controlled by a few sportsmen's organizations in the east. Notwithstanding this, he added, Delegate Sutherland during the past session of Congress introduced a bill ostensibly giving Alaskans the right to make regulations, that in reality perpetuated the regime of the sporting clubs. The game commission provided for in the bill, he declared, was no more than a rubber stamp affair and had no authority of any kind.

For Literacy Test

Pointing out that when the Indian bosses go to the polls Tuesday they, in effect, will cast something like 1,000 votes, Mr. Boyle declared that this was a practical demonstration of the great need for a literacy test law in Alaska. "Everybody here knows that at least 75 per cent. of the Indians voting do not know for whom and what they are voting. The Government fixes the voting age of white citizens at 21 years. Yet the majority of those Indians who will be voted cannot compare in intelligence and knowledge with a 12 or 14 year old white child," he said.

There are a number of Indians who are qualified to vote, who have a working knowledge of American ideals and principles of government, who read, write and speak English and think for themselves, he said. These are entitled to vote and no literacy test would deny them that right.

No New Situation

The menace to the Territory occasioned by mass voting of illiterate Indians under the domination of self-seeking bosses, he said, is not of late creation. It was foreseen years ago and the attention of the entire Territory was drawn to it two years ago when the Foster Literacy Bill was introduced in the Alaska Legislature. Arguments that such a law would be unconstitutional he characterized as ridiculous and cited similar laws in force for years in many states throughout the country.

"If our opponents are sincere in their belief that the Alaska Legislature has no right to pass such a law, then Delegate Sutherland is responsible for the present situation. He knew two years ago what was being done yet he made the effort to get Congress to remedy the situation," Mr. Boyle declared. He pointed out that Congress last Spring passed a bill granting blanket citizenship to all Indians within Territorial United States yet Mr. Sutherland failed to make any effort to safeguard Alaska. "He had William Paul's word for it that he could not be elected without the Indian vote and he knew it to be true. And I don't believe he can even be elected with it," asserted the speaker.

ALL CITIZENS SHOULD VOTE TOMORROW

Everyone who has a vote owes it to Alaska, to his community and to his family and himself to go to the polls tomorrow and cast a ballot. IT IS THE MOST IMPORTANT DUTY OF THE DAY.

The polls will open at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning and close at 7 o'clock in the evening. VOTE EARLY!

Mr. Boyle then quoted from the platform adopted by the Republicans in the Third Division as it appeared in advertisements in newspapers published in western towns. From this he read articles advocating full Territorial government, a literacy test law and other things advocated in the Democratic platform. "They criticize those things here but they advocate them there," he said.

Charges Neglect

He charged Mr. Sutherland with neglect of his official duties. The Delegate had told of how difficult it was to get legislation, he said, but when a personal friend of Mr. Sutherland needed a special act in order to prospect a coal claim in Southeastern Alaska, it took but some 60 days to get it through both houses of Congress and signed by the President.

In further support of his charge he pointed to the lack of legislation to turn over part of the revenues from the fur seal industry to the Territory. He showed that a bill for this purpose had passed the Senate on March 27, last, and sent to the Lower House of Congress. After it had been referred to a committee there, it was never heard from again, although it had the approval of Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce.

Mr. Boyle pointed out that the net revenues from this source for the past ten years had averaged about $200,000 annually. This money is placed in the Federal treasury. He argued that it should be turned over to the Territory and pledged that he would secure its allotment if elected.

MAJOR WALLACE KIRBY

Major Wallace Kirby, U. S. A., has been named head of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington, which turns out all the paper money, stamps and bonds for the United States Government. The appointment follows a reorganization of the bureau after a bitter partisan fight of two years ago, when President Harding dismissed twenty-six officials without a hearing.

AFRICAN CHIEF'S WIVES VEIL TO GO TO MOVIES

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Emir of Katsina, who governs a district of Nigeria many times larger than England, attended a moving picture show the other night in London, for the first time in his life.

The emir was enthusiastic about the movies. He was accompanied by his two favorite wives, who remained closely veiled throughout the performance. Upon their arrival at the theatre the wives were escorted into the manager's office to wait until the lights went down so that they should not be seen by vulgar eyes.
